don Jaycees junior golf tournament.

Macaulay got down in two from 10 feet on the first extra hole to beat Turner, who lives in London but spends the summers near Barrie, after both had carded 75s for the regulation 18 holes.

As it turned out Macaulay's worries were unfounded. He said he had no chance to win on the second nine holes and thought Fin Melville, of St. Thomas, would win. Melville was three-over-par after 12 holes and Macaulay five-over.

His anxiety cost him a double bogey on the 13th. What Macaulay didn't know was that Melville had knocked two balls out of bounds on the same hole and taken a nine.

After the 13th Macaulay was two-under but he had to scramble to preserve his chances. He rapped his tee shot onto the second fairway on the 17th, punched a nine-iron through some trees and holed out a 20-footer for a birdie.

On the 18th, the Sunningdale shotmaker knocked his approach shot over the green into the parking lot. He received a free drop and wedged up to four feet for another birdie.

Macaulay, whose tournament appearances have been limited to a few weeks each year because of his work, said he hasn't had much time to practice on the course. "But Norman's been away most of the summer, so I haven't got tips from him," he said when asked about his association with the CPGA champion.

In the playoff, Turner tangled with the trees and lost when he gambled going over the top and didn't make it to the green with Macaulay on the putting surface in two.

Ken Somerville, of London Hunt, son of international golf star Sandy Somerville, blew his chance to tie by three-putting the last hole from 30 feet. He charged an eagle putt and went past. He finished second in the junior group with 76. Ken Darnell, of Thames Valley, was next at 77.

Doug Comanic, another Thames Valley golfer, won the juvenile section with a steady 77, two strokes ahead of his closest rival. Neil Cascagnette, of Strathroy, who wasn't satisfied with playing just nine holes, fired a four-over-par 36 on the nine-hole course to win bantam honors.

Cascagnette teed off in an unofficial tour after his round and got as far as the eighth hole when he was summoned to accept his prize.

Connie Hueston, of Thames Valley, led the girls' field for the second year in a row with a 91. She had broken 90 twice
